Speakers should be totally impartial

The annual conference of Speakers of Lok Sabha and Assemblies started off with the President exhorting them to preserve the dignity of the high Constitutional office. Once elected Speaker, one is expected to shed his party loyalties and conduct the proceedings impartially, in a fair and equitable manner. In actual practice, many of the decisions of the Speakers have proved to be controversial before the Courts and they drew adverse criticism as well. The Speakers enjoy enormous powers while conducting proceedings, like allowing members to ask questions, take action against errant members by expelling them, suspending them and even disqualifying them.
