Why should legislators attend this program?

India continues to grapple with delivering quality healthcare and education across its states. Most states fall short of the National Health Policy (2017) target of allocating 8% of their budget to health, as personnel shortages and limited coverage remain key concerns. States are estimated to spend 15% of their budget towards education. Despite this, gaps in learning outcomes, teacher shortages, and low enrolments in higher education persist.

In this workshop, experts will discuss these challenges and explore pathways for progress. This workshop will help participants understand recent trends across states and identify opportunities to improve healthcare and education outcomes.

These discussions will enable participants to engage more effectively in the legislative process.
