15. DISTRICT MASS EDUCATION (AKSHRA BELAKU)

Adult illiterate people in rural areas, mainly women, are engaged in agriculture and other rural jobs. In the state of Karnataka, the Women and Child Welfare Department has set up self-help societies with the aim of promoting women empowerment and savings, many of which are found to be illiterate. Making them literate and providing financial literacy will improve their standard of living.

According to statistics from the Department of Women and Child Welfare, Karnataka has a total strength of 1,50,000 female SHGs with 22,13,505 members. Of these 16,60,129 members are illiterate. This is not helping the self-help groups. Also, many government development projects have not been able to benefit. Therefore the Female Energy Self Help Group has launched a fully literacy program within the group. And a full literacy program for illiterate men and women under the District Panchayat Link Document Grant

To accommodate for increasing population and to reduce the pressure on existing forests, social forestry takes up plantations which meet the day-to-day requirements offirewood, timber, fodder,organic material for manure, fruits and flowers. They also create an atmosphere with good weather, cool air, and provide a favorable habitat for many birds and animals. These plantations are maintained with the help of the same people that we aim to benefit and this is achieved by generating awareness on social forestry and its advantages.

2. Extraction of Forest Produce: -

Plantations raised by social forest division are handed over to the concerned gram panchayats orvillage forest committees after an initial maintenance of 3-4 years. It is their responsibility to handle further development and protection.Once plantations come to harvest, as per the demand from the panchayats, the plantations are harvested following due procedure.
